Top 10 Tips on writing great ATHENA nominations

(information from ATHENA International website)

1. Tell the nominee what you are doing. This can't be a surprise; you will need to interview her and people who know her.
2. Ask for help reviewing the nomination script. Even editors need editors.
3. Share the load. Family, friends, marketing, public relations or human resource departments in the nominee's organization may be available to help.
4. Freelance writers if you are pressed for time.
5. Skip the adjectives and focus on anecdotes and examples. One potent verb is worth three cliched adjectives.
6. In that same vein, focus on their results – not superlatives.
7. Don't exceed 3 pages of text. (each committee member will review up to 10 or more nomination packages)
8. Don't focus exclusively on the present. Try to establish a pattern of achievement over time. What was the nominee doing in the 80's-90's? Leadership examples over their various stages of life.
9. Include direct quotes about the impact the nominee has had on individuals you interviewed.
10. Remember: ATHENA awards go to women who actively assist women in realizing their full leadership potential. Invest time to quantify that; it can make the difference when the selection committee is deciding among the top candidates.
